Housing and Residence Life Resources

Living Learning Communities

ETSU provides students with the opportunity to participate in Living-Learning Communities. A Living-Learning Community (LLC) is a group of residents living together on a floor or within a building who share a common major, interest, or program affiliation. Research has shown that residential learning communities are beneficial to college students and help students succeed. Students in the LLCs come into the community with something in common, whether it is a major or interests. This helps residents build study groups and make friends. Residents in the LLCs have added face-to-face interactions with faculty, staff, and advisors who can offer support in classes or be there in mentorship roles. By participating in LLCs, residents have the opportunity to study together with fellow residents and take advantage of academic resources, and interact outside the classroom in ways that help them find their place at the University. ETSU has several living-learning communities including:

Buccaneer Achievers Living-Learning Community

The Buccaneer Achievers LLC provides students with the skills and support to help them successfully complete their degree at ETSU. Members of this community can expect to have connections with academic advising, tutoring, and career services staff. Members of the Buccaneer Achievers LLC enroll in designated sections of courses, including ETSU 1020: Foundations of Student Success, and MATH 1530: Probability and Statistics.
